Burundi-Rwanda: Ethnic Violence Increasing

Armored vehicles of the Tutsi-dominated military fired indiscriminately into Hutu suburbs of Bujumbura this week, [REDACTED]
Residents [REDACTED] are afraid to leave their homes.

— The military crackdown on Hutus, inspired by the slaughter of Tutsis in Rwanda, may rekindle the ethnic bloodletting that reportedly has killed more than 100,000 Burundians since last year. [REDACTED]

A ruling by the Tutsi-dominated Constitutional Court yesterday calls into question the recent installation of President Ntibantunganya and may presage efforts by Tutsi politicians to reopen agreements on political power sharing and possibly to enlist the support of the military.

— In southern Rwanda, aid workers report that thousands of Rwandan Tutsi refugees have been killed by Rwandan Hutu militias near the Burundi border. [REDACTED]
